Evaluate

Investor and analyst Q&A prep with Claude in 5 steps

Save this before your next results call

1. Start with public material
2. Generate the likely questions
3. Draft answers from your source material
4. Find the hard questions
5. Check consistency

Swipe for the 5 steps

by Christophe Atten

Step 1 of 5

1

Start with public material

Last results, last call transcript, analyst notes you're allowed to use, press coverage. Public sources only at this stage.

Prompt to copy Public sources only.

```
I have uploaded our last results release, the last call transcript and recent public analyst commentary.

Summarise the five topics analysts focused on most, with examples of their questions.
```

Step 2 of 5

2

Generate the likely questions

Ask for the 20 questions analysts are most likely to ask, grouped by topic, with the reason each might come up.

Prompt to copy Grouped by topic.

```
Based on these materials and this quarter's themes:
[THEMES], list the 20 questions analysts are most likely to ask.

Group them by topic and give the reason each question
might come up.
```

Step 3 of 5

3

Draft answers from your source material

For each question, draft an answer using only the approved messages and figures you provide. Mark anything without a source.

Prompt to copy

From approved messages only.

```
Here are our approved key messages and figures: [PASTE]

Draft an answer of max 80 words for each question, using only this material.
Mark any question that the material doesn't answer with [NO SOURCE].
```

4

Find the hard questions

Ask: "Which five questions would be most uncomfortable to answer, and why?"
Start there.

Prompt to copy

Prepare these first.

```
Which five questions would be most uncomfortable for us
to answer, and why?

For each, suggest what a credible, factual answer needs to include.
```

Step 5 of 5

5

Check consistency

Compare the draft answers with previous calls and published statements.
Inconsistencies are what analysts notice.

Prompt to copy Against past statements.

```
Compare the draft answers with what we said on the last two calls: [PASTE OR UPLOAD]

List any answer that could look inconsistent with a previous statement.
```

Before you start

One rule

Unpublished results are inside information. Only use an AI setup your organisation has explicitly approved for that, once compliance agrees. Until then, work with public material.

Free resource

Get the free prompts

Free. The link is in the post.

No signup.

