Step 1 of 5

1

Give it the skeleton first

Paste last month's report structure and tell it to keep the same sections, order and tone. Consistency matters more than creativity.

Prompt to copy Paste once at the start.

You are helping me draft our monthly management report for [ORGANISATION TYPE].

Here is last month's report: [PASTE]

Keep the same sections, order and tone. Use British English and short sentences.
Use only the figures I give you. Never invent numbers or reasons.
Mark every sentence that needs my judgement with [VIEW].

Reply "Ready" and wait for the data.

Step 2 of 5

2

Feed it numbers, not raw data

Use the KPI table with variances already calculated. The spreadsheet does the maths.

Prompt to copy KPI table with variances already calculated.

Here is this month's KPI table. Variances are already calculated, do not recalculate them.

[PASTE TABLE: KPI | actual | target | prior month | prior year]

Notes from the business: [PASTE OR "none"]
```

Step 3 of 5

3

One section at a time

KPI commentary first, then risks, then outlook. Long single prompts produce long, vague reports.

Prompt to copy One section at a time.

Write the KPI commentary section.

For each KPI that moved by more than [X]% or missed
target:
1. State the movement.
2. Name the driver, if the notes give one.
3. Mark [CHECK] if no driver is given.

Maximum two sentences per KPI.

Step 4 of 5

4

Separate facts from judgement

Facts come from the table. Judgement, like "we expect this to continue", must come from you.

Prompt to copy

Facts separated from judgement.

Write the risks and outlook section.

List up to five risks mentioned in the notes, each with the KPI it could affect.
For the outlook, write only what the notes support. Mark every forward-looking statement with [VIEW] so I can confirm or change it.
```

Step 5 of 5

5

Write the summary last

Once the sections are reviewed, ask for a 5-bullet executive summary. Lead with what changed and what needs a decision.

Prompt to copy

Write it last, after your review.

Here are the reviewed sections: [PASTE]

Write a 5-bullet executive summary.
Lead with what changed this month and what needs a decision.
Keep each bullet under 25 words.
